

QIKO

A Marketing Plan for Ember Kitchen Catering

From Healthy Tingkat to a Standalone B2C Brand

Virgilio Almeida | April 2025

The Organisation and the Problem

Ember Kitchen Catering

Singapore-based halal-certified catering company

Est. annual revenue S$2.8M (primarily B2B)

Core business: weddings, corporate events, institutions

Kitchen operating at ~65% capacity

MUIS halal certification (significant competitive moat)

Healthy Tingkat Product

B2C meal subscription launched 2 years ago

Cook-chill technology, twice-weekly delivery

Revenue ~S$180K/year (just 6% of total)

Growth stalled at ~8% year-on-year

The Problem

The product is good. The brand is wrong.

No standalone brand identity

B2C product marketed through B2B channels

Instagram shows corporate events, not meals

Website buries meals under wedding packages

Target customer never sees the product

The product is in the wrong building.

Market Landscape and Competition

Singapore healthy meal delivery market growing at ~12% annually. Total addressable market S$380M-S$450M.
Meal subscription segment ~S$80M-S$120M.

Grain

S$9.95/meal

Premium modern
Strong brand
Partial halal

AMGD

S$8.90/meal

Mid-range health
Calorie-counted
No halal cert

YOLO Foods

S$13.90/day

Premium fitness
Macro-counted
Not halal

Yummy Bros

S$7.00/meal

Budget fitness

Not health-focused

Qiko Target Position: Mid-range (S$8.50-S$10.50), halal-certified, HPB-endorsed, modern health-tech brand. The halal + HPB combination is currently unoccupied.

Target Market and Personas

Primary target: Health-conscious professionals aged 22-45 in Singapore

Priya, 28

Marketing Manager

Works in CBD, finishes late
Currently spends S$15-20/dinner on Grab
Wants healthier and cheaper
Discovery: Instagram Stories and Reels
Halal matters (shares with colleagues)

Jason, 34

Software Engineer

Trains 4x/week, tracks macros
Used Yummy Bros and YOLO (repetitive)
Wants variety at S$9-10/meal
Discovery: Reddit, TikTok, gym word-of-mouth
High protein, not boring

Mei Ling, 42

Working Mother

Two school-age children
Tired of "what to cook" cycle
Values tingkat format but wants healthier
Less price-sensitive, very quality-conscious
Discovery: Facebook parent groups

Healthy Tingkat becomes Qiko

From Mandarin "Qi" (vitality, life force, energy)

Why Rebrand

"Healthy Tingkat" anchors to traditional format and invites unfavourable price comparison

"Healthy" as a prefix is meaningless. Every brand claims it.

The name cannot stand alone on Instagram, retail shelves, or in conversation

Qiko Brand Identity

Short, memorable, phonetically clean in English and Mandarin

Warm, grounded, quietly confident personality

Vibrant teal (#1A9E8F) + warm coral (#E8734A)

Clean, modern typography (geometric sans-serif)

Matte packaging with front-facing nutrition labels

"Meals that actually fuel you. Halal certified. HPB endorsed. Delivered."

Marketing Mix (7Ps)

Product

Core meals, QikoFit (fitness),
Build-a-Bento (custom),
Freezing retail line (Y2)

Price

S$8.10-S$10.50/meal
Tiered plans (4.5-9% savings)
First Week Free (200 subs)

Place

DTC website (mobile-first)
Grab + Foodpanda (M5)
Cold Storage retail (Y2)

Promotion

Instagram-first social strategy
15-20 micro-influencers
HPB badge + PR launch

People

Part-time brand manager
Freelance photographer
Existing kitchen team

Process

Order > Choose > Deliver
(Mon/Thu)
Cook-chill, 5-day shelf life
4-min reheat

Physical Evidence

Branded matte packaging
Standalone Qiko website
HPB Healthier Choice badge

Content and Social Media Strategy

Instagram (Primary)

@qiko.sg
4-5 feed posts/week
7-10 Stories/week
2-3 Reels/week
Pre-built grid of 15-18 posts before launch

TikTok (Secondary)

Short-form video
3-4 videos/week
Behind-kitchen, taste tests
"What I eat in a day"
Discovery engine, not conversion

Facebook

Targets 35-50 demographic
3-4 posts/week
Community groups
Targeted advertising
Customer service channel
